

What is claimed is:

1. A foldable cellular phone comprising:
  - a first casing including a display;
  - a second casing including keys and hinged to said first casing;
  - and
  - a third casing accommodating a camera unit and a receiver unit therein and received in a bore, which is formed in one end of said first casing, and rotatably connected to said first casing;
  - wherein said third casing is configured such that when an output portion of said receiver unit faces a display side of said first casing, a lens portion of said camera unit is concealed by the one end of said first casing.
2. The phone as claimed in claim 1, wherein said bore is positioned at substantially a center of said first casing above said display, and said third casing is rotatable about a vertical axis within said bore.